SOCI327 : Personality and Social Structure

This course is a study of social structure and personality development of the individual. The course will examine personality development and its intersection with social structure components including gender, race, class, culture, social networks, birth order, family roles, and cohorts.
Credits 3
Prerequisites
PSYC121 Introduction to Psychology or SOCI101 Introduction to Sociology.