

BIOS445 : Field Research Experience

This course is an independent research project conducted by the student. Students will formulate a research question, gather background information from published sources, design experiments, and collect data. Students will learn to critically evaluate, process and analyze collected data. The course will also focus on correct interpretation of results and their presentation in written and oral forms.

Credits 3

Prerequisite Courses

BIOS330